Despoil'd
Of all our good, sham'd, naked, miserable. Ad. Hen.
What hurt can there be in all the flanders and disgraces of this world, if they are but the arts and methods of providence to shame us into the glories of the next. South.
Were there but one righteous man in the world, he would hold up his head with confidence and honour; he would shame
the world, and not the world him. South.
He in a loathsome dungeon doom'd to lie,
In bonds retain'd his birthright liberty,
And sham'd oppression, till it let him free. Dryden.
The coward bore the man immortal spite,
Who sham'd him out of madness into flight. Dryden.
Who shames a scribbler, breaks a cobweb through;
He spins the slight self-pleasing thread a-new. Pope.
2. To disgrace.
Certes, sir knight, ye been too much to blame;
Thus for to blot the honour of the dead,
And with foul cowardice his carcass shame. Fairy Queen.
So bent, the more shall shame him his repulse. Milton.
To SHAME. v. n. To be ashamed.
Great shame it is, thing to divine in view,
Made for to be the world's most ornament,
To make the bait her gazers to embrew;
Good shames to be to ill an instrument. Spenser.
Sham'd thou not, knowing whence thou art exalted,
To let thy tongue detect thy base-born heart? Shakespeare.
To the trunk of it authors give such a magnitude, as shame
to repeat. Raleigh's History of the World.
Auster spy'd him,
Cruel Auster thither hy'd him;
And with the rush of one rude blast,
Sham'd not spitefully to waste
All his leaves, so fiesh, so sweet,
And lay them trembling at his feet. Crauw.
SHAMEFACED. adj. [shame and face.] Modest; bashful;
easily put out of countenance.
Philoclea, who blushing and withal smiling, making shame- facedness pleasing, and pleasure shamefaced, tenderly moved her feet, unwonted to feel the naked ground. Sidney.
Confidence is a blushing shamefaced spirit, that mutinies in a man's bosom: it fills one full of obstacles. Shak. R. III.
A man may be shamefaced, and a woman modest, to the degree of scandalous. L'Estrange.
Your shamefaced virtue shunn'd the people's praise.
Dryden.
From this time we may date that remarkable turn in the behaviour of our fashionable Englishmen, that makes them
shamefaced in the exercise of those duties which they were wont into the world to perform. Addison's Freeholder.
SHAMEFACEDLY. adv. [from shamefaced.] Modestly; bashfully.
SHAMEFACEDNESS. n. f. [from shamefaced.] Modesty; bashfulness; timidity.
Dorus, when he had sung this, having had all the while a free beholding of the fair Pamela, could well have spared such horror, and defended the assault he gave unto her face with bringing a fair stain of shamefacedness into it. Sidney.
Why wonder ye,
Fair sir, at that which ye so much embrace?
You shamefaced are, but shamefacedness itself is the. Fa. Qu.
None but fools, out of shamefacedness, hide their ulcers, which, if shown, might be healed. Dryden's Duressney.
SHAMEFUL. adj. [shame and full.] Disgraceful; ignominious;
infamous; reproachful.
Phebus flying so moist shameful sight,
His blushing face in foggy cloud implies,
And hides for shame. Fairy Queen.
This all through that great prince's pride did fall,
And came to shameful end. Fairy Queen.
For this he shall live hated, be blasphem'd,
Seiz'd on by force, judg'd, and to death condemn'd,
A shameful and accurs'd! Milton.
His naval preparations were not more surprising than his quick and shameful retreat; for he returned to Carthage with only one ship, having fled without striking one stroke. Arbuth.
The brave of diamonds tries his wily arts,
And wins, O shameful chance! the queen of hearts. Pope.
SHAMEFULLY. adv. [from shameful.] Disgracefully; ignominiously; infamously; reproachfully.
None but that saw, quoth he, would ween for truth,
How shamefully that maid he did torment. Fairy Queen.
But I his holy secret
Presumptuously have publish'd, impiously,
Weakly at least, and shamefully. Milton's Agonistes.
Would shamefully fail in the last act in this contrivance of the nature of man? Mare.
Those who are ready enough to confess him, both in judgment and profession, are, for the most part, very prone to deny him shamefully in their doings. South's Sermons.

SHAMELESS. adj. [from shame.] Wanting shame; wanting modesty; impudent; frontless; immodest; audacious.
To tell thee whence thou cam'st, of whom deriv'd,
Were shame enough to shame thee, wert thou not shameless.
Shakespeare's Henry VI.
Beyond imagination is the wrong
That the this day hath, shameless, thrown on me. Shaksp.
The shameless denial heretofore by some of their friends, and the more shameless justification by some of their flatterers, makes it needful to exemplify, which I had rather forbear. Rah.
God deliver the world from such hucksters of souls, the very shame of religion, and the shameless subverters of morality. South's Sermons.
Such shameless bards we have; and yet 'tis true,
There are as mad abandon'd critics too. Pope.
SHAMELESSLY. adv. [from shameless.] Impudently; auda-ciously; without shame.
The king to-day, as one of the vain fellows, shamelessly un-covereth himself. 2 Sa. vi. 20.
He must needs be shamelessly wicked that abhors not this licentiousness. Hale.
SHAMELESSNESS. n. f. [from shameless.] Impudence; want of shame; immodesty.
Being most impudent in her heart, she could, when she would, teach her cheeks blushing, and make shamefulness
the cloak of shamelessness. Sidney.
He that blushes not at his crime, but adds shamelessness to his shame, hath nothing left to restore him to virtue. Taylor.
SHAMMER. n. f. [from sham.] A cheat; an impostor. A low word.
SHAMOIS. n. f. [chamois, French.] See CHAMOIS. A kind of wild goat.
I'll bring thee
To clustring fibers, and sometimes I'll get thee
Young shamois from the rocks. Shakespeare.
SHAMROCK. n. f. The Irish name for three leaved grass.
If they found a plot of watercresses, or shamrocks, there they flaked to a feast for the time. Spenser on Ireland.
SHANK. n. f. [precana, Saxon; schenkel, Dutch.]
1. The middle joint of the leg; that part which reaches from the ankle to the knee.
Eloofous her white strait legs were altered
To crooked crawling shanks, of narrow emptied;
And her fair face to foul and loathsome hue;
And her fine corps to a bag of venom grew. Spenser.
The sixth age flits
Into the lean and slipper'd pantalon,
With spectacles on nose, and pouch on side;
His youthful hose, well sav'd, a world too wide
For his shrunk shanks. Shak. As you like it.
A stag lays, if these pitiful shanks of mine were but answerable to this branching head, I can't but think how I should defy all my enemies. L'Estrange.
2. The bone of the leg.
Shut me nightly in a charnel-house,
O'er cover'd quite with dead men's rattling bones,
With reeky shanks, and yellow chapels skulls. Shakespeare.
3. The long part of any instrument.
The shank of a key, or some such long hole, the punch cannot strike, because the shank is not forged with substance sufficient. Moxon.
SHANKED. adj. [from shank.] Having a shank.
SHANKER. n. f. [chancre, French.] A venereal excrescence.
To SHAKE. v. a. preter. shaked; part. pass. shaken and shaken.
[scjppan, Saxon; schepjen, Dutch.]
1. To form; to mould with respect to external dimensions.
I that am not shap'd for sportive tricks,
Nor made to court an am'rous looking-glass;
I, that am rudely stamp'd, and want love's majesty,
To strut before a wanton ambling nymph. Shaksp. R. III.
Those nature hath shaped with a great head, narrow breast, and shoulders sticking out, seem much inclined to a consumption. Harvey.
Mature the virgin was, of Egypt's race;
Grace shap'd her limbs, and beauty deck'd her face. Prior.
The faultless form,
Shap'd by the hand of harmony. Thomson.
2. To mould; to cast; to regulate; to adjust.
Drag the villain hither by the hair,
Nor age nor honour shall shape privilege. Shaksp. Tit. And.
Mr. Candish, when without hope, and ready to shape his course by the East homewards, met a ship which came from the Philippines. Raleigh.
To the stream, when neither friends nor force,
Nor speed nor art avail, he shapes his course. Danham.
Charm'd by their eyes, their manners I acquire,
And shape my foolishness to their desire. Prior.
3. To image; to conceive.
Lovers and madmen have their feeding brains,
Such shaping fantasies that apprehend
More than cool reason ever apprehends. Shaksp.

SHA

It is my nature's plague
To spy into abuse, and oft my jealousy
Shaksp. Othello.
Shapes faults that are not.
When fancy hath formed and shaped the perfect ideas of beauteous, our own more happy experiences of greater must disabuse us. Byzle.
4. To make; to create. Obsolete.
I was shapen in iniquity, and in sin did my mother conceive me. Pf. li. 5.
SHAPE. n. f. [from the verb.]
1. Form; external appearance.
He beat me grievously in the shape of a woman; for in the shape of a man, master Brook, I fear not Goliath with a weaver's beam. Shakespeare.
The shapes of the locusts were like unto horses prepared for battle. Rev. ix. 7.
The other shape.
If shape it may be call'd that shape had none,
Distinguishable in member, joint, or limb. Milton.
In vegetables and animals the shape we most fix on, and are most led by. Locke.
2. Make of the trunk of the body.
First a charming shape enslav'd me,
An eye then gave the fatal stroke;
'Till by her wit Corinna sav'd me,
And all my former fetters broke. Addison.
3. Being, as moulded into shape.
Before the gates there sat
On either side a formidable shape. Milton's Paradise Lost.
4. Idea; pattern.
Thy heart
Contains of good, wise, just, the perfect shape. Milton.
5. It is now used in low conversation for manner.
SHAPELESS. adj. [from shape.] Wanting regularity of form; wanting symmetry of dimensions.
You are born
To set a form upon that indigelt,
Which he hath left so shapeless; and so rude. Shakespeare.
He is deformed, crooked, old and fere;
Ill-fac'd, worse-bodied, shapeless ev'ry where. Shakespeare.
What fools were here,
Disguis'd like Mulevites in shapeless gear? Shakespeare.
Thrice had I lov'd thee,
Before I knew thy face or name;
So in a voice, so in a shapeless flame,
Angels affect us oft, and worshipping'd be. Donne.
Now the victor stretch'd his eager hand,
Where the tall nothing stood, or seem'd to stand;
A shapeless shade, it melted from his sight,
Like forms in clouds, or visions of the night! Pope.
Some objects please our eyes,
Which out of nature's common order rise,
The shapeless rock, or hanging precipice. Pope.
SHAPELESSLY. n. f. [shape and shapeless.] One who undertakes to improve the form of the body. A burlesque word.
No shapelessness yet set up and drove a trade,
To mend the work that providence had made. Garth.
SHAPELINESS. n. f. [from shapeless.] Beauty or proportion of form.
SHAPELY. adv. [from shapeless.] Symmetrical; well formed.
SHARD. n. f. [schard, Trifick.]
1. A fragment of an earthen vessel.
For charitable prayers,
Shards, flints, and pebbles should be thrown on her;
Yet here she is allow'd her virgin chants,
Her maiden frowns. Shak. Hamlet.
2. [Shard.] A plant.
Shards or mallows for the pot,
Keep the loosen'd body sound. Dryden's Horace.
3. It seems in Spenser to signify a frith or strait.
Upon that shore he spied Atin stand,
There by his master left, when late he sav'd
In Phedria's fleet bark, over that per'ous shard. Fa. Queen.
4. A sort of fish.
SHARDBORN. adj. [shard and born.] Born or produced among broken stones or pots. Perhaps shard in Shakespeare may signify the sheaths of the wings of insects.
Ere to black Hecate's fummons
The shardborn beetle with his drowly hums
Hath rung night's yawning peal, there shall be done
A deed of dreadful note. Shakespeare.
SHARDED. adj. [from shard.] Inhabiting shards.
Often shall we find
The sharded beetle in a safer hold,
Than is the full-wing'd eagle. Shakespeare's Cymbeline.
To SHARLE. v. n. [scaryan, scjpan, Saxon.]
1. To divide; to part among many.
Good fellows all,
The latest of my wealth I'll share amongst you. Shakespeare.
Any man may make trial of his fortune, provided he acknowledge the lord's right, by sharing out unto him a toll. Carew.
Well may he then to you his carus impart,
And share his burden where he shares his heart. Dryden.

SHA

In the primitive times the advantage of priesthood was equally shared among all the order, and none of that character had any superiority. Calder.
Though the weight of a fallhood would be too heavy for one to bear, it grows light in their imaginations when it is shared among many. Addison's Spectator.
Suppose I share my fortune equally between my children and a stranger, will that unite them? Swift.
2. To partake with others.
The captain, half of whose soldiers are dead, and the other quarter never mustered or seen, comes shortly to demand payment of his whole account; where, by good means of some great ones, and privy sharings with the officers of other some,
he receiveth his debt. Spenser on Ireland.
In vain does valour bleed,
While avarice and rapine share the land. Milton.
Go, silently enjoy your part of grief,
And share the sad inheritance with me. Dryden.
Wav'd by the wanton winds his banner flies;
All maiden white, and shares the people's eyes. Dryden.
This was the prince decreed
To share his sceptre. Dryden's Æn.
Not a love of liberty, nor thirst of honour,
Drew you thus far; but hopes to share the spoil
Of conquer'd towns and plunder'd provinces. Addison's Cato.
All night it rains, the shears return with day;
Great Jove with Cæsar shares his sov'reign sway. Logie.
3. To cut; to separate; to sheer. [From scean, Saxon.]
With swift wheel reverle deep enter'ing shar'd
All his right side. Milton.
Scalp, face, and shoulders the keen steel divides,
And the shar'd visage hangs on equal sides. Dryden.
To SHARE. v. n. To have part; to have a dividend.
I am the prince of Wales; and think not, Percy,
To share with me in glory any more. Shaksp. Henry IV.
Had greater haste these sacred rites prepar'd,
Some guilty mouths had in your triumphs shar'd; Dryden.
But this untainted year is all your own.
A right of inheritance gave every one a title to share in the goods of his father. Locke.
This is Dutch partnership, to share in all our beneficial bargains, and exclude us wholly from theirs. Swift.
SHARE. n. f. [from the verb.]
1. Part; allotment; dividend.
If every just man, that now pines with want,
Had but a moderate and befitting share,
Of that which lowly-pamper'd luxury
Now heaps upon some with vast excels. Milton.
They went a hunting, and every one to go share and share like in what they took. L'Estrange.
The subdued territory was divided into greater and smaller shares, besides that reserved to the prince. Temple.
I'll give you arms; burn, ravish, and destroy:
For my own share one beauty I design;
Engage your honours that the shall be mine. Dryden.
While fortune favours,
I made some figure; nor was my name
Obscure, nor I without my share of fame. Dryden's Æn.
The youths have equal share
In Marcia's withes, and divide their sifter. Addison's Cato.
In poets, as true genius is but rare,
True taste as seldom is the critic's share. Pope.
He who doth not perform that part assign'd him, is a very mischievous member of the publick; because he takes his share of the profits, and yet leaves his share of the burden to be born by others. Swift.
2. A part.
These, although they bear a share in the discharge, yet have different offices in the composition. Brown's Vulgar Errors.
3. [Scear, Saxon.] The blade of the plow that cuts the ground.
Nor laws they knew, nor manners, nor the care
Of lab'ring oxen, nor the flining share. Dryden.
Then let him mark the sheep, or whet the flining share.
Dryden's Virgil's Georg.
Great cities shall with walls be compass'd round,
And sharpen'd shares shall vex the fruitful ground. Dryden.
Incumbent o'er the flining share
The master leans, removes th' obstructive clay. Thomson.
For clay the coulter is long and bending, and the share
narrow. Mortimer.
SHARBONE. n. f. [share and bone.] The os pubis; the bone that divides the trunk from the limbs.
The cartilage bracing together the two ossa pubis, or share-
bones, Bartholine faith, is twice thicker and laxer in women than men. Derham.
SHARER. n. f. [from share.]
1. One who divides, or apportions to others; a divider.
2. A partaker; one who participates any thing with others.
Most it seem'd the French king to import,
As sharer in his daughter's injury. Daniel's Croft War.
People not allowed to be sharers with their companions in good fortune, will hardly agree to be sharers in bad. L'Estr.
An
